Dachshunds

Dachshunds comes from the German language meaning badger dogs and are considered extremely courageous canines. They were bred in Germany to hunt badgers and other small underground animals. They are also known as “wiener dogs” because of their body style which can make them prone to back injuries. There are three types of dachshunds: shorthaired, longhaired and wirehaired. Dachshunds are a kind, loyal and sometimes very stubborn breed of dog that originated in Europe.

Dachshunds are known for their keen hunting skills. When they cornered a badger underground, they needed strength to hold out against their prey. Their short legs made them good at tunneling. These dogs’ noses are their greatest weapon. Standard size dachshunds are meant to hunt larger prey such as foxes or badgers. Miniature breeds are more bred for hunting rabbits and rodents. These dogs are extremely fast runners.
