Education Professors, School and District Administrators

Description of the Seminar

The research is clear that regular formative assessments are the key to improving student achievement. This session will provide hands on practical tools for utilizing formative assessments to measure and manage each student's learning. Participants will understand the role of assessment in the learning process, identify the key factors to consider when developing formative assessments, and identify the implications for classroom and team assessment practices. Descriptive feedback and grading practices will be explored. Assessments are not truly formative without student involvement. This session will include examples of how to involve students in their learning and assessment. Student work samples will be shared.

About Sharon Kramer

Dr. Sharon Kramer is an "educators' educator" with a clear understanding of what it means to be involved in a collaborative culture that relies on frequent common formative assessments to improve student learning. Her extensive knowledge base inspires trust and equips her to present clear, practical information. Her enthusiasm leaves a lasting impression on audiences everywhere. She has taught at the elementary, secondary, and university level, and has served as assistant superintendent and principal. Her extensive experiences in urban and suburban school districts have shaped her vision of success for all students.
