

Yichien Cooper, Ph.D.

Born in Taiwan, Dr. Yichien Cooper received her Ph.D. in Arts Education with a Museum Studies Certificate from Florida State University. Specializing in integrating arts, she is an adjunct professor at Washington State University Tri-Cities. She actively advocates arts education in the community. She is the Vice Chair of Richland Arts Commission, a guest curator at the Richland Public Library, an art studio director, and an artist. She is currently the Acting President and International Coordinator for The World Chinese Arts Education Association. Her research interests include integrating arts curriculum, cultural aesthetics, exceptional art programs, art for life, and art standards. She is a member of the “Data Visualization” Research Commission for the National Art Education Association. Her research on museum educators was selected as the text for 2013 Guggenheim Museum Education Training Program, New York. She was the 2013 Academic Research Showcase recipient at Washington State University. She has published chapters and journal articles in United States, Taiwan, and China. She was invited to give keynote speeches at art education conferences in Taiwan, China, South Korea, and Malaysia.