

Linda E. Stairet

Linda is, first and foremost, a classroom teacher. Her 37 year tenure has mostly been in Richland classrooms. While completing her MAET she taught as a graduate assistant and instructor at WSU, Pullman. After returning to teach at Richland High, she again took a leave after several years to help establish and teach in Canada's first university wide writing program at the University of Winnipeg. This final foray into college teaching convinced her that high school was where she belonged, and she returned to Hanford High to teach ELA courses ranging from ninth grade support to senior AP Literature and Composition. Six years ago, she left Hanford on a special teaching assignment to launch the ELA/Humanities curriculum at Delta High School. Her latest teaching adventure as a Classroom Support Teacher for RSD Teaching and Learning, allows her to work with fellow classroom teachers, in all disciplines, to continuously grow and refine instruction.
