

Mason C. Rivers

Mason Rivers, EdS, NCSP, is a school psychologist for the Beaverton School District in Oregon. Previously trained as a music educator, Mason has worked with children and adolescents his entire career. Having years of experience at all grade levels, he currently works with high school students. In addition to his school-based work, he provides district-wide training for school psychologists and special education teachers on Pattern of Strengths and Weaknesses assessment for Specific Learning Disability identification and intervention. He is a frequent guest-lecturer at Lewis & Clark College (his alma mater) and the current President of the Oregon School Psychologists Association. His professional interests include cognitive and academic assessment, systems-level development, leadership, and advocacy.