

Randy Fairfield

Randy Fairfield is an Instructional/Technology Classroom Support Teacher in the Richland School District. Prior to becoming a CST, Randy spent seven years teaching middle school and high school Language Arts and Social Studies courses in diverse and challenging teaching environments.

His experience has included teaching in high poverty schools in the Wahluke School District, a drop-out recovery school in the Pasco School District, and a parent partnership program in the Richland School District. In these environments Randy has learned to leverage technology as a tool to engage and inspire students from diverse backgrounds to help them become achievers. He has presented at the 2014 RtI-PLC Conference, the 2015 WALA Spring ALE Conference, and will be presenting to an audience of approximately 50,000 at EdmodoCon 2015 in August.
